Transitional Assignments Benefit Agencies and Employees

Keeping injured workers at work is one of the best ways to support them. By identifying physically appropriate transitional work for injured workers, you can help them return to their usual and customary job faster than those that stay home during their recovery. Injured employees benefit from maintaining their work routine and the camaraderie that comes with staying on the job even if they are working in a limited capacity. Risk Control Online gives you an excellent way to identify work that is within the employee's physical restrictions. Just click on the employee's restrictions, choose the departments they can work in, and then select from a list of appropriate tasks.
